Legislators Giving Close Study To Proposals on Needy Children

By VINCENT THOMAS

Assemblyman, 68th District
Last year about this time great public indignation was being expressed over the serious defects in our California aid to needy children program. County officials, parents' organizations, taxpayer groups, all were levying criticism at the program on the ground that its extreme liberality was encouraging illegitimacy, and the breakdown of family units, at the expense of the very children the system was designed to protect.

And there seems to have been considerable ground for such appraisals. Ten years ago, 131,349 children in families were receiving this aid. In June of last year, the figure had jumped to 209,498, an increase of almost 60 per cent during the period. Costs had zoomed ever faster. Total payments in 1950-51 were $72.7 million. In 1959-60 they were up to $129.8 million, a rise of 78 per cent.

THE SENATE fact finding committee on labor and welfare started an intensive investigation of the aid program, and held several public hearings on the problems involved. Representatives of the state department of social welfare presented much factual material. County welfare executives, and district attorneys, described their difficulties in making sure that aid was granted only to those really eligible, or in tracking down deserting fathers who evaded their family responsibilities at the taxpayer's expense.

As a result of its studies the committee developed a series of bills to tighten up the law relating to aid to needy children. These bills were introduced early in this session. Recently several of them passed the Senate by substantial majority votes, and they are now before the Assembly committee on social welfare for consideration and action.

ONE OF THE most important of these measures would fix the responsibility of step-fathers and common law husbands with respect to children in homes which they support. Under present law, a stepfather is liable for support of an unadopted stepchild only up to the limit of his wife's

Harbor Plans For 1000 at Summer Term

More than 1000 students are expected to enroll in the coming summer session at Harbor College, according to Dr. Robert V. Bacon, dean of summer session.

The session begins Monday July 10, and ends Friday, Aug. 18. The college lists over 100 courses in the 1961 summer curriculum, and a complete schedule of classes is available now, Bacon said.

Registration for all students will be held from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 6 to 8 p.m. on May 18 and 19 and on July 6 and 7. No individual appointments are necessary for summer session registration.

According to a recent sampling of student opinion, highest enrollments will be in English, psychology, history, art, typing, shorthand, speech, history, philosophy, algebra, trigonometry, chemistry, and health education.

community right in his income. This bill would remove this limitation, so his liability would extend to his total income.

The bill would also write in to the law a provision that "an adult male who is assuming the status of husband" would be responsible for support of children in the home. This would spell out the effect of a recent Supreme Court decision on this point, which the department has included in its regulations.

OTHER BILLS would establish policies for the guidance of administrators. One would change the purpose of the law to give aid "reasonably and fairly" instead of "liberally." Another would require the counties to emphasize economic rehabilitation of needy families. A third would add to the law a statement that its principle requires equal treatment by administrators of both recipients and taxpayers.

Still other measures would strengthen enforcement powers of district attorneys with respect to support liability of parents in several ways. One provision would make any adult who wilfully uses any part of a grant under the law for any other purpose than that for which it is made, guilty of a misdemeanor.

ANOTHER would permit counties to require written statements from families seeking aid, or from absent fathers, under penalty of perjury for false statements.

The many agencies and groups which have cooperated in the development of these bills will watch their progress in the Assembly with great interest.
